About

Tamir Chagal is a partner in the firm's High-Tech, Internet and Life Sciences department.

Tamir advises various high-tech companies, ranging from the fields of software companies (such as mobile and other online platforms) to companies engaged in the biotech and medical devices business. Tamir provides ongoing day-to-day legal advice to the department's clients, from the incorporation stage until maturity and any "exit."

Tamir has vast experience in negotiating commercial transactions and in drafting complex agreements related to investments, corporate governance, intellectual property related transactions (such as software licensing), services and R&D agreements, and international commercial transactions.

Furthermore, Tamir has a rich experience in assisting start-ups, including with respect to incorporation and unique commercial agreements, and in providing legal advice to officers and directors.
